EDITORIAL OPINION

TUESDAY'S ELECTION

As this is written, it appears that the Democrats have regained control of the House of Representatives, regained a large number of governorships, and that the Republicans will retain control of the Senate by a margin of one or two seats.

Also, as this is written, it appears that the Republicans retain at least two of their three Congressional seats in Virginia. This is one more than had been expected. So far as we could observe, the Democratic leadership put forth a minimum of effort to regain the three Congressional seats in the Old Dominion, although some effort was made in the Ninth District. To that extent, the results in Virginia are not surprising.

In Appomattox County, the vote was very light. This was doubtless because of the conceded election of the incumbent Senator and Representative.

Nationally, the election was featured by a larger than anticipated vote and the great number of very close contests. So many close contests showed up counting of the results. In one contest, the result was so close that an official recount may be necessary. That was New Jersey, in the race for the Senate. But in contest after contest across the nation, the voters were almost evenly divided.

The Democratic victory for control of the House will be welcome in the South, where many veteran Representatives will move up to key committee chairmanships and positions of legislative rank.

It is our opinion that a feeling of overconfidence caused the Democrats to fail to gain control of the Senate. The Republicans "ran scared" — putting forth maximum effort to get out their vote. Save in a few states such as Michigan, the Democrats were lulled to complacency by a glance at the pre-election polls.

Among the results of interest we might list the return of Alben Barkley to the Senate, and the victory of the Democrats for Governor in New York State. Mr. Barkley is 77, but he is a vigorous figure and will add prestige and dignity to the Senate. The victory of Mr. Harriman in the big New York election will give to him and his wing of the party added voice in party counsels. Another sidelight was the victory of a write-in candidate for the Senate in the State of South Carolina.

After an election, it is traditional that the American people close ranks and cooperate for the good of the nation. We hope that the victory of the Democrats in so many key contests and their control of the House will lead to more bipartisanship in matters of major concern, especially in the field of foreign policy.

In conclusion, we congratulate A. Willis Robertson and Watkins M. Abbitt upon their re-election to the Senate and House, respectively. It is well to know that Virginia gave a vote of confidence to such able representatives.

Subscription rate: $2.00 a year; payable in advance.

SENSELESS BRAVADO

(The Winchester Star)

With juvenile delinquency alleged to be increasing, many studies have been made to determine what makes young people turn "bad." Among the many theories advanced are the usual ones such as that the older generation is going to the dogs, or parents are more to blame than the children, or comic books, television and radio are responsible, and so forth.

In conjunction with these theories there is another one which is often overlooked by those seeking to place the blame for youthful errants. That is the fact that society itself has changed. No longer is the importance of hard work and serious thinking stressed in the home.

While the 40-hour week and child labor laws eased the burdens of many, they also left much unspent energy bottled up in the young people, many of whom began looking for diversions to give them a "thrill" or leave off steam.

One of the most useless, dangerous and popular diversions of the younger set is the game of "chicken!" This game involves no intelligence, no coordination, no stamina —in fact nothing more than a desperate desire to prove oneself more insanely brave than the other fellow.

Until recently participants limited themselves to antics in automobiles which many times snuffed out the lives of thrill-crazed kids and innocent bystanders as well. But now a new twist has been provided to the game. Instead of automobiles, trains are used and the idea is to see who can stand in front of a speeding train the longest without jumping to the side or, of course, getting hit.

As long as youth has unspent energy tempting it into adventuresome diversions, there will be an ever increasing percentage of those who will weaken and join their brethren in demented pastimes such as the game of "chicken."

STRENGTH OF THE ECONOMY

(Washington Post)

In Detroit the other day President Eisenhower's chief economic counselor, Dr. Arthur Burns, gave a report on the economy that must have greatly heartened his audience. It was the kind of thoughtful, nonpolitical analysis of the state of the nation's business that can do more to create confidence in the government that a score of political speeches. Dr. Burns did not promise the world, nor did he deny that there had been a recession. On the contrary to analyze the forces behind it. From this analysis he reached some moderately optimistic conclusions. While no one can be sure about the future, he thinks the evidence indicates that we are entering a phase of economic expansion. If the recovery should prove abortive, however, he promised new steps by the government to help maintain stable prosperity.

There are many reasons for Dr. Burns' conclusion that "business activity as a whole is improving." The most important is that consumer income has hely very high despite the drop in industrial production. Certainly there has been no other recession in which personal, disposable income rose in the face of a 9 per cent fall in industrial production. Dr. Burns' explanation of this phenomenon is one of the most incisive commentaries that have been made on the operation of the automatic stabilizers. The stabilizers "cannot be counted on to prevent a depression," he asserted, "but they can be of very material assistance." They were of material assistance in 1953-54. Their potential role, Dr. Burns says, must be enlarged, with possibly a stronger unemployment insurance system. At the same time, "the government must take preventive action" when danger looms and not wait until the therapeutic measures are needed." Dr. Burns believes that the government has taken preventive action in monetary policy, tax policy, stockpiling, expansion of social security and other measures.

In this field, administration critics say that Dr. Burns is too cautious. He still is curiously worried about the possibility of inflation, which now seems to be remote. Critics likewise differ with him in his emphasis on monetary policy. It has been a factor of real significance in 1953-54, and it is a handy and useful weapon in fighting inflation. But does it deserve, as Dr. Burns puts it, "a high priority" in the arsenal of antidepression measures?

The general excellence of Dr. Burns' analysis makes all the more regrettable his decision not to issue a midyear economic report from the Council of Economic Advisors. Such a document would have been immensely useful in this year of economic uncertainty.

Jennings win in Ninth District by a 991 vote margin out of some 75,000 cast in Tuesday's election for Congress.

AHS Newscast

By Jane Holt

November 4, 1954

Dear June,

Guess what? Appomattox beat Bedford Friday night! Isn't that wonderful! The score was 25 to 6. Teddy Mitchell made three touchdowns plus one extra point, and Deetsie Rothgeb scored another touchdown. John Rothgeb did some mighty fine passing. Another outstanding performance was given by Jerry Georgi on the line. The team was really playing ball and they did the best job ever. You know, of course, this victory caused us to win the Group II, District 4 championship. The students were supporting our team quite well. This week the A. H. S. varsity motors to Augusta Military Academy to play Friday afternoon. We wish them the best of luck.

Tuesday the following clubs met: The Junior Music Club, the Senior Science Club, and the S. C. A. These are all active organizations in our club program.

Last Wednesday we had Assembly. Mr. John Crafton, the sanitation officer, spoke to us concerning the cases of rabies that have been in surrounding counties. Following this Mr. Kerr talked to the group. Announcements were made by Edna Gregory and Eloise Couch, urging the students to support our annual and school paper.

Our gym is really progressing quite well. As basketball season soon starts, we are hoping that we can start playing in our new gym before too long.

This concludes the happenings around AHS this week. Be looking for more news from me next week.

'Til then,

Jane.
